

It's my intention that this idea should be a part of the public domain and should never be patented.

This idea was posted on the internet, and was declared to be public domain, prior to Monday, October 30, 2006.

This document was most recently revised on Monday, April 5, 2021.

This document is approximately 151 words long.

Are you worried about global warming? My global cooler is part of the solution to the problem.

I stopped during a ride to town on Tuesday, October 17, 2006 and pushed the little rig off of the road to take this picture. I was on Old Linden Road, near Show Low, Arizona. There's actually prettier scenery at other locations along the road but I took the picture at this location because there was a relatively level place where I could easily get off of the road and lean Crazy Horse against a little tree.

Crazy Horse and the Global Cooler